DON MACLEAN

CPYRGHT

ASIDE: Jose Jimenez, the nutty comic who speaks with a Mexican dialect, has a new album on which he pretends to be the chief (or should that be "Executive Director?") of the CIA. A reporter asks him who was the greatest spy of all time and he says, "Beethoven." The reporter says, "Beethoven? I didn't know he was a spy." Jimenez says, "See how good he was?" • There's a night spot in Georgetown that has the front door sealed shut and a sign that says "Use Alley Entrance." So you do and the next sign says, "Walk Up." You walk up the stairs, take about three steps and then you must walk down a long flight of steps to finally get into the main room, which is right by the front door that was sealed up in the first place.
